FOR NATIONAL SECURITY—

The "Little-Known" Chemical Corps

BY MAJ. GEN. E. F. BULLENE, USA
Chief Chemical Officer

HISTORICALLY speaking, chemical warfare predates practically all forms of modern warfare. The writings of Kautilya and Ramayana (2000 B.C.) about the wars of ancient India mention smoke screens, incendiaries, and fumes that caused "slumber" or "prolonged yawning." However, it remained for World War I to see the introduction of modern chemical warfare, poison gas, flamethrowers and incendiary bombs, all by the Germans.

Maj. Gen. Bullene

Despite this air of antiquity about chemical warfare, the Chemical Corps is one of the youngest permanent services in the Army. The Chemical Warfare Service was established on a temporary basis on 1 July 1918, and became a permanent branch of the Army under the National Defense Act of 4 June 1920. In August, 1946, the name was changed from the Chemical Warfare Service to the Chemical Corps.

Modern gas warfare began on the morning of 22 April 1915, when the Germans lined up 1200 chlorine gas cylinders in their trenches at Ypres, Belgium, and sent the greenish poison rolling into the opposing French and Canadian trenches. More than 5,000 casualties resulted.

Two years later the United States entered the war. However, the defensive and offensive aspects of gas warfare were then the responsibility of five different agencies: The Bureau of Mines, research and development; the Medical Department, procurement and supply of gas masks, other defensive equipment, and defensive training; the Ordnance Department, toxic agents and filled chemical shells; the Signal Corps, gas alarms; and the Corps of Engineers, offensive training and actual combat employment of gas. The need for a centralized service to conduct all of these activities resulted in the creation of the Chemical Warfare Service in 1918.

At that time, the mission of the Corps dealt only with the smoke, incendiary, and gas aspects of chemical warfare. Through the years many changes have been made in the mission—at one time the development of new insecticides and rodenticides was included. Today, the broad general mission of the Chemical Corps is to study and investigate toxico-

Dept. Plans to Fight Bar to Retirements

The Defense Department told THE JOURNAL this week that it plans to offer "strong opposition" in the Senate to the House-passed amendment which would prevent retirement of military personnel for reasons other than age or physical disability.

A statement setting forth the objections of the Department is being prepared for submission to Congress, but Defense officials declined to comment on its contents until it has been received by the Committee.

During debate on the amendment to the Defense Department appropriation bill last week-end, Representative James E. Van Zandt (R-Pa) told the House that almost two thousand officers and men were retired during the first eight months of the Korean war at "an additional cost to the American taxpayer."

Representative James P. S. Devereux (R-Md) inquired if the amendment provides "for those officers who have not been selected for promotion and thus wish to retire, and also that they become extra numbers in grade so that it will not impede the orderly flow of promotions?" Mr. Van Zandt replied that the amendment "provides that these officers shall be carried as extra numbers and, therefore, their retention on active duty will not impede the usual flow of promotions." (Note: Although this may be Representative Van Zandt's intent, observers fail to find any such provision in the amendment as adopted by the House.)

The Pennsylvania Republican said that adoption of the amendment "will strengthen our National Defense by retaining on active duty during the present emergency, experienced and duly qualified personnel."

As written into the bill now before the Senate the amendment would be in effect only for the duration of the current fiscal year. Van Zandt indicated, however, that a similar provision would be contained in the next appropriations bill. He said, "we would have to renew this limitation on the expenditure of funds for the next fiscal year."

Earlier, Representative Carl T. Curtis (R-Nebr) contended that there is an "alarming . . . loss of talent within the Armed Forces." He said the Defense Department had received requests during the first half of 1951 for retirement of "27 Army generals, 22 Navy admirals, and 10 Air Force generals."

The Van Zandt amendment, passed by the House, provides that no part of the new appropriations can be spent to pay retirement benefits to any officer or enlisted man who retires from the Armed Services in the future for any reasons other than physical disability or age. It does not affect the retired pay of those previously retired.

Representative George H. Mahon (D-Tex) objected to the amendment on the

Army-Air Force Promotions

Army and Air Force promotion lists in this issue of The Journal include 494 Air Force officers (assigned to HQUSAF, HQMATS, and the Air Proving Ground, Eglin AFB) promoted to the grades of colonel and lieutenant colonel (beginning on page 1447), and 510 Army officers promoted to the rank of major (on back page).

Force Reservist Release

In what he called "a ninth-inning attempt" to correct "the shameful treatment" of Volunteer and Inactive Reservists who have been recalled to duty involuntarily, Representative James E. Van Zandt (R-Pa) introduced an amendment to the appropriations bill to effect their release.

The measure, passed by the House 122-102, and now before the Senate, provides that no portion of the appropriations can be used after 30 Nov. 1951 to pay any member of the Inactive or Volunteer Reserve who completed 12 months of active duty service during World War II (7 Dec. 41 to 2 Sept. 45) "if such member shall have served on active duty for a period of 12 months or more after 26 June 1950" unless he volunteers to remain on active duty.

"If you want to recognize a group of Americans who have already made their contribution in World War II, and who are being forced to make another contribution to World War III," Van Zandt said, "and if you want to help the Reservists in the future, I urge that you pass this amendment and return these boys to their homes for Christmas Day 1951."

He said the amendment gives the Armed Services "nearly four months' notice to call up paid reservists and draftees to replace the inactive and the volunteer reservists."

The Defense Department told THE JOURNAL it was opposed to the amendment and is submitting to Congress "as part of the hearings," its objections. No disclosure of the contents of this statement can be released, the Department said, until the Committee has received it.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Armed Services Committee also opposed the measure. He said it "would completely destroy a great many units in the Navy."

Some of those who spoke in defense of the amendment had this to say:

Representative Roy W. Wier (D-Minn) — "This matter has been a terrible headache to me. . . I have had over 75 requests from young fellows who had just established themselves in civilian life after paying the price during many years of service in World War II, leaving families behind, leaving obligations behind and suffering undue hardships. . . I hope that the House does adopt this amendment because we will put the military authorities on their sincerity in the Selec-

Pay-As-You-Go Plan For Survivors Asked

The movement to set up a system of survivor benefits to be paid for by deductions from the pay of members of the Services received new impetus this week in the form of a Department of Defense sponsored bill.

Hearings were begun by a subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee under the chairmanship of Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex) who sponsored last year's bill.

Strong endorsements of the new bill were given by representatives of the Navy, which has been designated as the action agency for the Department of Defense in this matter, as well as the Army, Air Force, and Marine Corps.

The bill also was endorsed by the Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and the Public Health Service, all of which are covered by its provisions.

The new measure differs in some respects from the bill sponsored last year by Mr. Kilday. The principal difference is that the amounts to be contributed by members of the Services have been increased by amounts ranging from 25 cents a month to $1.25 a month. The new contributions for officers range from $4.75 a month for second lieutenants and ensigns receiving base pay only to $16.75 a month for major generals and rear admirals of the upper half, and above, who are receiving basic pay plus flight or submarine pay. Enlisted contributions range from 50 cents to $3.50 a month, and warrant officers from $4.75 to $9.25.

It is recalled that after the hearings held in June of 1950 Mr. Kilday told THE JOURNAL further study would have to be made to check the soundness of the measure from an actuarial standpoint and also that there was some opposition from insurance interests. The increased rates in the new bill probably reflect these studies.

The proposed system would be compulsory for all members of the active forces, except that those in the Services on the date of the enactment of the bill would have the option of rejecting the plan.

The measure would permit retired officers, both those already retired and those retired subsequent to the passage of the act, to participate or not as they elect. However, the bill does not set forth their rates except to say that they would be based on "actuarial equivalents."

The benefits to survivors, in the case of active personnel, would be 25 per cent of his active base pay to be paid to his widow plus $360 a year for each child up to a maximum of $900 a year. Where there are no widows, dependent parents would participate in the benefits. Where there are no eligible survivors the estate of the deceased would be paid $500 or 25 per cent of one year's base pay.

The benefits for survivors of retired personnel who enter into the program are not set forth, it merely being stated that

THE WAR IN KOREA

THIS week's ground fighting in Korea was characterized by a series of sharp patrol skirmishes on practically all sectors of the front and by increased combat intensity at the extreme eastern end of the long battle line.

In the vicinity of Kansong, near the east coast, attacking South Korean troops fought several seesaw battles with the enemy, as they struggled for possession of dominating heights. The Republic of Korea forces made limited gains in the face of stubborn Red resistance.

A heavy, concentrated air attack was made by the Allies on Pyongyang, capital of North Korea, an important military transportation and supply center for the Communists. Medium and light bombers, fighter-bombers, and carrier-based Marine planes rained demolition and incendiary bombs on marshalling yards, warehouses, gun positions, barracks and military headquarters. The raid came at a time when the Red delegation at the Kaesong armistice conference was denying that Allied air attacks were causing serious damage to North Korea. It served as a practical rebuttal to this argument.

Bombardment by warships of enemy-held ports and communications networks on both coasts continued. Carrier-based Navy planes patrolled highways and rail lines, knocking out enemy traffic, and provided close support for ground troops.

Improved weather conditions greatly facilitated Allied air operations, with Air Force planes again registering more than 1,000 sorties on some days during the week. There was a slight increase in enemy air activity, but there were no important air combats. Several flights of enemy planes were observed, but in almost every case they fled to the safety of Manchuria on the approach of Allied aircraft.

Throughout most of the front, ground contact with the enemy was largely limited to light patrol action. Both sides sent out small reconnaissance detachments to probe enemy positions, but there were no major engagements, except at the eastern end of the line, where there was brisk fighting between units of battalion size.

In the area south of the neutral zone protecting the Kaesong conference, United Nations reconnaissance elements encountered enemy troops and fought a desultory engagement, lasting several hours, which was finally broken off by the withdrawal of our troops. Patrols of both sides were active throughout the remainder of the western front.

There were light probing attacks by the enemy along portions of the central front, all of which were repulsed without difficulty. Platoon and company size enemy groups were engaged south of Kumsong over a period of two days, during which the enemy launched a minor local attack. At the conclusion of the period the Reds withdrew.

West and southwest of Kansong, near the east coast, there were relatively small but bitterly fought engagements between Republic of Korea troops and North Korean Reds. Commanding hill positions changed hands several times, but the Allied troops retained the initiative and made limited gains. Along the coast, advance elements of advancing South Korean troops received Naval gunfire support in the area near Kosong.

Allied naval, air and surface units made intensified strikes against the enemy, with bombardments of both coasts, as clearing weather permitted full air operations.

The U. S. Destroyers Hopewell and Uhlman and the Destroyer Escort Hanna continued the long bombardment of the enemy-held east coast port of Wonsan. The Uhlman scored direct hits on enemy gun positions, while the Hopewell caved in the roof of a communications building and inflicted numerous troop casualties. The Hopewell got direct hits on an airfield and knocked out gun positions.

At Songjin the U. S. Destroyer-Mine-sweeper Thompson and the Destroyer Escorts Seiverling and Moore bombarded rail and highway bridges and intersections. The U. S. Heavy Cruiser Toledo and the Netherlands Destroyer Van Galen knocked out several sampans at Chongjin and scored direct hits on rail lines, factory buildings, warehouses, and a boat basin.

On the west coast, British Commonwealth naval units bombarded enemy positions and troop concentrations in the Yonan area. Included in the operation were the Australian Patrol Frigate Murchison, the British Patrol Frigate Cardigan Bay, and the New Zealand Patrol Frigate Hawea. The U. S. Light Carrier Sicily furnished Marine air spotters for the bombarding warships.

U. S. Navy flyers from the Heavy Carriers Boxer and Bon Homme Richard concentrated air attacks on the vital east coast supply route. They destroyed or damaged numerous rail cars, trucks, ox carts, buildings and bridges.

Marine pilots from the Sicily inflicted many casualties on enemy troops in the Haeju and Yonan areas. Others hit docks, supply dumps, and troop positions south of Chinnampo. Many flights of Marine planes joined in the heavy air attack on Pyongyang.

In much improved weather, the Far East Air Forces increased the intensity of air attacks throughout North Korea, devoting much attention to supply routes, transportation facilities, gun positions, ammunition dumps, warehouse and troop concentrations.

U. S. Medium B-29 bombers flew from bases in Okinawa and Japan to lead a heavy attack on military targets in and near Pyongyang. Most of them dropped their bombs visually, but occasional cloud pockets necessitated radar aiming in some instances. Strikes in smaller force were made on supply centers at Wonsan, Kyomipo and Chinnampo.

The Superforts were heavily escorted by U. S. Sabre jets and Australian Meteors. No enemy aircraft were sighted, but considerable flak was encountered. A few of the medium bombers sustained minor damage, but all returned safely to their bases. Preceding the strikes, several flights of fighter-bombers, flying at low altitudes, struck enemy anti-aircraft positions to minimize flak. They also hit ammunition dumps and other specific military targets.

Medium bombers and Marine flyers also made night sweeps of enemy highways, knocking out numerous trucks. Enemy traffic was also hit by American, South African, and Australian planes, with many vehicles reported destroyed.

Two F-51 Mustangs were lost to enemy ground fire near Chinnampo. One of the pilots was rescued from the Taedong River by an Allied amphibian plane.

The Department of the Army this week estimated that enemy casualties since the start of the Korean war on 25 June 1950 through 31 July 1951 had reached a total of 1,237,872, an increase of 9,018 over the last previous estimate, covering the period through 23 July. The increase represents an average of more than 1,000 casualties per day for the eight days since the concluding date of the previous estimate.

Of the total casualties 621,367 are North Koreans and 616,505 Chinese Reds. Included among the North Korean losses are 377,035 killed and wounded, 97,119 sick and injured, and 147,213 prisoners of war. There were 513,721 Chinese battle casualties, 85,159 non-battle casualties, and 17,625 prisoners of war.

As a measure of comparison of recent losses the Defense Department this week announced that notification had been made to next of kin of 80,750 American battle casualties from the start of the war through 10 August 1951. This is an increase of only 320 in a week. Total losses of Allied troops, including South Koreans, for the period of the war have not been accurately computed to date, but are estimated at about one-third as many as those sustained by the enemy.

Secretary of the Navy Dan Kimball gave strong endorsement to the bill. He told the committee:

"As you distinguished members are aware, during the past several years, the Armed Forces, together with the Congress, have made considerable progress toward improving conditions and opportunities for our service personnel. By creating reasonable incentives, providing for more equitable treatment and giving increased attention to the well being and security of the individual, the morale and effectiveness of our fighting forces as a whole have risen accordingly.

"There still remains, however, one very serious gap in our program. With very few exceptions, a service man is unable to provide that in the event of his death the surviving members of his family, dependent upon him for support, will be able to readjust and sustain themselves at a decent standard of living.

"The pensions provided by the Veterans Administration, while certainly helpful, are still inadequate to meet minimum living costs. The rates of pay in most of the grades do not permit the building up of an adequate program of commercial life insurance.

"This condition has presented an increasingly serious problem. In all too many cases men have died on active duty and, through no fault of their own, their dependent families have been left virtually destitute.

"Another related factor in this same problem concerns those who qualify for retirement after long periods of active service. Their retired pay, however, ceases on the day of their death and there is presently no means of continuing the support for a surviving widow, other than a small and flat rate pension provided by the Veterans Administration and then only when her annual income does not exceed $1,000.

"These conditions stand in very unfavorable comparison to the survivor benefits that are available to nearly all other persons employed by the Federal government.

"Since 1947, the Department of Defense, together with the Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey and Public Health Service have had this problem under intensive study seeking a practical means of solution. It was soon apparent that the best answer lay in the direction of providing an equitable system of annuities payable to surviving dependents. A bill to provide such is being sponsored by the Department of Defense and is now with the Bureau of the Budget for consideration. This bill is somewhat similar to H. R. 8035, 81st Congress, but it has been redrafted and, we believe, improved as a result of the hearings held in June, 1950. This bill will provide a graduated scale of annuity benefits to the surviving dependents of all members of the Uniformed Services who die while serving on active duty. The amounts of these annuities have been designed to supplement rather than to replace the pensions and death payments otherwise provided by existing law. Thus, it is hoped that the total benefits that would be available to survivors will better enable them to make the necessary readjustments in their mode of living and to maintain themselves on an adequate self-respecting standard.

"The bill also provides that members who have been placed upon the retired list may elect to receive a reduced amount of their retirement pay so that if a member predeceases his widow, the latter may continue to receive an annuity for the remainder of her life. This feature of the bill is very similar to the survivors' annuities available to members of the other branches of the government.

"I wish particularly to emphasize that under normal and foreseeable conditions the enactment of this bill will not result in any increased cost to the government. The annuities will be paid from a special fund created by the bill and will be maintained by prescribed monthly deductions from the pay of all participating members. The amounts of the annuities and the graduated scale of monthly pay deductions have been calculated on a sound actuarial basis and after intense study.

"This proposed bill has the strong approval and endorsement of the Department of Defense and all of the Uniformed Services. It has been prepared with the cooperation and assistance of highly recognized insurance authorities, and its provisions have been declared sound, practical and constructive by leading government actuaries. The Bureau of the Budget has authorized the Department of Defense to present this bill to the Congress as a Department of Defense sponsored bill. It is hoped and expected that the views of the Bureau of the Budget on the bill will be available prior to the conclusion of these hearings.

"The enactment of this bill will in my opinion, be a tremendous forward step in our efforts to provide an improved personnel program. For as you will readily see, by enabling the members of the Uniformed Services to make more adequate provision for surviving dependents in the event of their death, it will do much to alleviate countless cases of hardship and distressing uncertainty.

"I respectfully request you to give this bill your usual careful study, earnest consideration, and then favorable action."

Excerpts from the testimony of other witnesses follow:

MAJ. GEN. JOHN H. McCORMICK, USAF

"The Air Force has a deep concern for the welfare of surviving dependents of its members who are killed or die while in the service of their country or while participating in training activities. Our officers and airmen cannot perform their difficult and often dangerous tasks at maximum efficiency if they must worry about the welfare of their families in the event of their own death.

"It is difficult, if not impossible, for the serviceman to create an estate, which with existing pensions and gratuities, would provide a widow and her children with an income sufficient for a bare minimum standard of living. All too frequently the death of a member has resulted in a drastic lowering of the standard of living of his surviving dependents, loss of educational opportunities for his children, and sometimes in desperate hardships.

"It is impossible for most members to carry enough life insurance to provide sufficient coverage. Moreover, during periods of international tension or war, as has existed for the past 10 years, commercial insurance usually is not available to service members. Even when no 'war clause' exists, strict limitations on the use of military aircraft are generally included in standard policies.

"The widow of a retired member has no service income on the death of the retired member, other than a meager pension from the Veterans' Administration paid under very restricted circumstances. She is probably at an age when employment or re-marrying opportunities are very limited. Unless the retired member has been able to create an estate during his years of active membership, the widow will suffer hardship.

"The legislation now being recommended will go far to alleviate the difficulties described."

VICE ADMIRAL L. T. DuBOSE, USN

"This bill would provide benefits for survivors of members of the uniformed services, regular and reserve, who die while on active duty. It would provide immediate annuities for the surviving dependents which would be payable from deductions made from the monthly pay of the members of the uniformed services. Also, it would provide a means whereby inactive retired members of the uniformed services could, if they elected to take a reduction in their retired pay, provide an annuity payable on their death to their surviving widows.

"Basically, the plan provides an amount of 25% of the basic pay for any member who dies while on active duty, payable to his surviving widow until her death or remarriage. For each child an additional $360 annuity, not to exceed a total of $900, would be paid to or on behalf of such child or children. If an active member dies leaving no beneficiary there would be paid $500 to his estate or to such person or persons as he may designate. Present law provides pensions at fixed rates for widows and children which are totally inadequate to provide security for surviving dependents of service men."

BRIG. GEN. W. W. WENSINGER, USMC

"The need for legislation of this type is real. Of my own personal knowledge, I know that many service personnel die leaving dependents not adequately provided for. This is true not only of the lower grades, but of the higher grades as well.

"A service career provides reasonable financial security for the individual himself, and I doubt if many service personnel realize the meagerness of the compensation now accorded their survivors under existing laws relating to veterans. This factor, and the difficulty of maintaining an adequate commercial insurance program on service pay, may at least partially account for the surprising number of dependents who are left in actual need.

"Retired personnel of the uniformed service are also vitally concerned with this program. Practically alone among large employee groups, personnel who earn retirement through careers in the uniformed services are unable, under existing law, to defer a portion of this earned benefit for the use of their survivors."

RELIEF SOCIETIES

Representatives of the relief organizations of the Services also appeared to give case histories of widows and minors, and some retired members of the Services aided by them.

Representing the Navy was Vice Adm. Vincent R. Murphy, UNS (Ret), who stated that actual dependency, modified by pension, insurance, and other receipts, is the controlling element in aid given by the Navy Aid Society.

The Navy Aid Society, he said, gives aid to the extent of $350,000 yearly; lends close to $3,000,000 a year; had 1370 applications for aid during fiscal 1951; and an income of about $800,000 yearly. He favored a self-supporting bill.

Col. W. R. Scott, representing the Army Relief Society, stated that the Society specializes in emergency cases in the Army and AUS. Chairman Kilday commented that "The Army aid society is more efficient than the American Red Cross in handling cases." Colonel Scott replied, however that his organization could not get along without the investigative aid of the Red Cross.

Col. H. N. Coles, representing the Air Force, stated that the chaplains are the Air Force's go-between in carrying on relief work, and that the Air Force had 2,501 casualty assistance cases during fiscal 1951.

Benefit Aid Societies

All three branches of the Armed Forces will give simultaneous demonstrations to entertain thousands of spectators at the Sixth Annual Armed Forces Benefit Football Game between the Chicago Bears and the Cleveland Browns, 9 Sept.

The site of the annual charity affair will be at Soldier Field, Chicago, and a capacity throng is expected to pack the huge stadium to see one of the best professional football games of the year.

Half time ceremonies on the playing field will include the Tenth Air Force Band, Navy Drill team, Army Drill team, the Marine Band and an anti-aircraft demonstration. The Tenth will also send a number of WAF's from Selfridge AFB to lend color to the game and participate in pre-game ceremonies. Air Force, Army, Navy, and Marine bands will also participate.

An Air Force static display will be located at Gate "O" consisting of an XF-85 Parasite jet fighter and a guided missile.

Last year the Armed Forces aid societies received over $47,000 as their share of the proceeds.

Shun Tax Relief

Tax relief for members of the Armed Services appears to be off for this session of Congress.

Senator George (D-Ga.), chairman of the Senate Committee on Finance, told THE JOURNAL this week that he doesn't believe his committee will get around to the matter of special military exemptions from income taxes at this session of Congress.

While he did not elaborate, it appears that the bills for military exemptions introduced by Senator Lehman and Senator McFarland were not put before his committee which is now concluding its sessions on the income tax bill. Senator George told THE JOURNAL that as far as he knows the only exemptions will be the special one put through last year for personnel serving in Korea.

There is a possibility that either Senator McFarland, who is the majority leader of the Senate, or Senator Lehman or one of the five Senators associated with him in the movement, may seek to amend the tax bill when it comes up on the floor. If no such move is made, or if it is unsuccessful, tax relief is definitely off for this year.

Army at Medicine Congress

Official representative of the Army Medical Service at the 10th Annual International Congress of Industrial Medicine to be held in Lisbon, Portugal, 9-15 Sept. will be Col. Wesley C. Cox, commanding officer of the Army Environmental Health Laboratory and consultant to the Surgeon General of the Army on Occupational Health & Hygiene.

Military Construction

The largest single military construction authorization bill ever submitted to the Congress, in peace or war, was passed late last week by the House of Representatives. Although it embraces a five and a half billion dollar program, the bill contains only an infinitesimally small amount for military family housing.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee said the bill "is to support an armed force of 3,500,000 persons. In no sense should it be construed as providing the facilities which will be required in the event of general mobilization." He said that, with the exception of the Army, "it will not accommodate any expansion of forces beyond the 3,500,000 projected for fiscal 1952."

A second measure—the Defense Housing Act—passed this week by the House, offers more hope of relieving the shortage of family dwellings near service posts. In a last-minute major change to the bill, the House agreed to permit the Government to start 50,000 public housing units during fiscal '52. President Truman has pointed out that priority in this part of the program will be given to low-income housing needs in defense areas.

Air Force authorizations in the military construction bill provide for almost three times the amount slated for the Army, and more than four times the amount for the Navy. Specific figures are: For the Army—$890,000,000 in continental U. S.; $175,000,000 overseas, and $302,000,000 in classified facilities, for a total of $1,368,000,000. For the Navy—$597,000,000 within continental U. S.; $75,000,000 outside U. S.; and $113,000,000 for classified installations, both within and without continental U. S.; for a total authorization of $785,000,000. For the Air Force—$1,993,000,000 within continental U. S.; $415,000,000 outside U. S., and $1,071,000,000 for classified facilities both within and without continental U. S. for a total of $3,480,000,000.

Chairman Vinson said the Army authorization provides for 141,112 new barracks spaces and 481 family quarters (486 of which are outside the continental U. S.). The Navy, he said, will get 32,100 new troop spaces, 1,500 bachelor officer spaces and 70 family-housing units (of which only 33 are in the continental U. S.). The Air Force, he continued, is authorized barracks to accommodate 518,000 troops, bachelor officers quarters for 19,000 officers, and 4,688 family quarters.

Three thousand of the AF family quarters are outside the continental U. S., and of the remaining 746 within the U. S., the only base that has an allotment of more than five such units is Limestone Air Force Base, Me.

CNO Pledges Cooperation

Chief of Naval Operations Admiral William M. Fechteler pledged to "further increase Navy cooperation with the Army and Air Force chiefs" in a speech at Charleston, W. Va., shortly before he took the oath of his new office.

He said he is "completely in accord" with the policies established by his predecessor, the late Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, and declared that "our armed forces must be brought to adequate strength and kept at that strength as long as Communist military might is capable of threatening any part of the free world."

Speaking at the West Virginia State Convention of the American Legion, the new Chief of Naval Operations called on Americans to keep up their guard. "We cannot afford to drop our guard for one instant," he said, "because that instant could well mark the deathknell of liberty throughout the world."

Admiral Fechteler said "We cannot consider the winning of one skirmish such as the Berlin airlift, or of one pitched battle such as Korea as signifying final victory in the overall struggle with world communism."

LIFE OF AN AUTO

In 1925 the average automobile lasted only 6.5 years and ran about 26,000 miles in its lifetime. By 1948 the average scrapped automobile had run 120,000 miles and was 13.6 years old. Thus, today's car lasts twice as long and runs four times as far as did the car of the middle twenties.

The message from General James A. Van Fleet said:

"I wish to convey my warmest congratulations to you and the valiant officers and men of your command and the attached units whose heroic conduct in the battle near Hongchun during the periods 16 May to 22 May 1951 has earned for them our Nation's highest award, the Distinguished Unit Citation for their gallantry, determination and esprit de corps. The system will be based on the general principle of returning first men having the longest periods of service on their current overseas tour of duty.

grounds that he believed "the military leaders who have retired have done so for good and sufficient reasons and that if we should become involved in a global war they would gladly return to the uniform."

Mr. Van Zandt said the retirement list "contains hundreds of duly qualified and experienced personnel whose services could be utilized at small cost to the Government. Yet the Army has recalled to active duty only 404 retired personnel, the Navy and Marine Corps 96, and the Air Force only six."

He said that "retirement of military personnel often requires the calling up of Reserves to fill such vacancies" and cited an example in which "a Navy captain was forced to retire recently at the age of 51 because he failed to be selected for promotion to rear admiral. His pay at the time of retirement was $860.25 monthly and after being retired he received $523.68 as his retirement pay each month. As a replacement for the retired Navy captain, a reserve commander was called from civilian life and added to the Federal payroll with a base pay of $689.25 monthly. Now we have the retired captain and the reserve commander both on the payroll at a combined monthly salary of $1,213.23." He charged this was "only one of many similar instances where the taxpayers' money is being wasted."

logical warfare, including chemical and biological warfare and radiological defense; to provide technical supervision of the training of the Army in these fields; and to develop, manufacture, procure and supply materiel and equipment pertaining to these types of warfare except as specifically assigned to other agencies.

The Chemical Corps position in the development field is unique in that most of its items are for use by all departments of the armed forces, not just the Army. And, under the "all departments" term, we must include Civil Defense, for it is in this type of planning that some of the Corps' defensive developments are now being revealed.

The Chemical Corps is probably the least known branch of the Army, since much of its work must go unpublicized in the interests of national security. Because of the very nature of its activities, 90% of the items that industry is called upon to manufacture for the Corps has no civilian counterpart.

While it is true that gas preparedness is a major responsibility—the carrying out of this responsibility undoubtedly deterred the enemy from use of poison gas in World War II—it must be recognized that "chemical warfare" is an elastic term. Under its present-day aspect it stretches to take in many scientific developments and applications that are little known to the general public. To the ordinary mind, "chemical warfare" suggests a single thought—war by poison gas.

During World War II, the 65,000 officers and men of the Corps did not sit around, waiting for a gas war that never started. Nor is the personnel of the Corps doing that today. They are in there; fighting with the air, sea and ground forces with a wide variety of materiel and services. In this respect, the Chemical Corps is a branch of the service whose responsibility extends from the heart of the Zone of the Interior to within a few feet of the enemy-held ground on the battlefield.

In 1924, the Corps developed the 4.2-inch chemical mortar as a means of propelling gas and smoke shells. By 1941, a high explosive shell was designed for the weapon. And, between 1941 and 1945, a total of 25 chemical mortar battalions and two separate chemical mortar companies saw combat duty. The outstanding support these men and their 4.2 mortar gave the Infantry, led to that service's

Thinking Inventing Building

TO MEET THE COUNTRY'S TELEPHONE NEEDS

The responsibility of the Bell System does not consist of merely supplying good telephone service today. We have to be always creating so that the service grows better and better.

THE CALL FOR PROGRESS

This process of creation can never stop, for the country's telephone needs are continually changing and increasing. So we must always be thinking ahead and inventing ahead and building for the future. This is what the country looks to us to do and we are doing it. It is especially important in these days of national defense.

The pre-eminence of telephone research and manufacturing reflects a dynamic policy and point of view throughout the business. The people needed to come up with new ideas and put them into action are constantly being encouraged and given opportunity.

We shall continue to meet the challenge of the future and do our full part, always, to advance the welfare, the strength and the security of the United States of America.

The project involves extension of four landing strips to 8,000 feet to permit the handling of heavier and faster planes, and strengthening of a fifth runway.

WONDERS OF WORKMANSHIP

Twenty-five years ago Electric Boat delivered two submarines to the Peruvian Government. In 1928, two years later, another pair of EBCo-built subs was purchased by Peru.

Last year, still sound and in excellent condition, these four sturdy craft with their Peruvian officers and crews arrived at New London for overhaul and modernization. They had traveled the entire distance from their home port in Peru under their own power and without mishap. When work on the subs was completed, they made the long trip home with ease.

This remarkable record of long life and trouble-free operation is dramatic evidence of the fine workmanship that goes into EBCo products. Our skill, experience and facilities are devoted to the defense of our country through the development and construction of ever better, more efficient submarines.

Adm. Bogan Backs USMC Bill

Vice Adm. Gerald F. Bogan, USN (Ret), this week came to the support of the bill to expand the Marine Corps and make its commandant a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The bill, which is officially opposed by the Navy Department as well as the Department of Defense, has passed the Senate and been reported out of the House Armed Services Committee. It now awaits action by the Rules Committee or some other opportunity to bring it before the House, which it is generally conceded will pass it by a safe majority.

In a letter to Chairman Vinson of the Armed Services Committee Admiral Bogan urged the enactment of the stronger version approved by the House Committee. He said that his own efforts "to suggest improvements in the somewhat unilateral functioning of that Department (Defense) under the National Security Act of 1947 led to my retirement in February of 1950."

Admiral Bogan retired after having been relieved as commander of the First Task Force following a press conference in which he had been quoted as saying he did not believe officers of the Navy could expect loyalty from the then Secretary of the Navy Matthews. Earlier Matthews had criticized him for a letter he had written on the subject of unification.

In his letter to Mr. Vinson Admiral Bogan said:

"My association with the Marine Corps began in 1917 when I was a junior officer in one of the escort ships taking the first troops, both Army and Marines, to France. That association continued through the years. In many of the marine landings in the Pacific during the last war I commanded the naval air support which provided tactical air assistance during the beachhead phase and later moved inland. Among those operations were Salpan, Guam, Pelelieu, and Okinawa. Each one demonstrated the efficiency, courage, and proficiency of the Marines in a highly specialized, thoroughly skilled aspect of war.

"It is my considered opinion, reached after many years, that the United States Marine Corps has no equal as a fighting organization in any nation in the world, including our own. The amphibious doctrines followed by our own and other armies in similar attacks were developed solely by the Marines with somewhat grudging assistance and skepticism by our Navy.

"That, however, is only one facet of the Marines' combat readiness. To the limit of their manpower and weapons, the Marines fight superlatively in any element and under all conditions. I believe those views are shared even by the very people who would oppose public recognition of the organization by denying it full participation in the meetings which determine its function, its stature, and its destiny. Only the Commandant and his staff, through knowledge and recognition of the problems of the corps and their unique experience in combined operations, can adequately represent the Marine Corps and speak its views.

"I believe that the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as presently constituted, have a preponderantly land-locked viewpoint, not commensurate with the military requirements of our Nation. I am also convinced that the addition of the Commandant of the Marine Corps to the Joint Chiefs of Staff would greatly improve the balance, judgment, and decisions of that body.

"The other feature of the bill, i. e., the size of the Marine Corps and its supporting air wings, is an unavoidable responsibility of the Congress. It is not the prerogative of the Secretaries of Defense and the Navy to specify the strength of the Marines in relation to the Navy; nor is it a question of duplication. There exists no duplicate of the Marines.

"It is my earnest hope that you and the distinguished members of your committee will not waver in your support of this measure, as amended by you, to the end that our Nation's defenses may be radically and permanently improved."

Critical Housing Areas

Solano County, Calif., and the Quad City area in Iowa and Illinois have been declared critical defense areas for housing by the Defense Production Administration and Housing and Home Finance Agency. This means that credit controls will be relaxed to permit construction of housing.

The Solano County area includes Mare Island Naval Yard at Vallejo, Benicia Arsenal, and Travis AFB. The Quad City area housing became critical with expansion of activities at the Rock Island Arsenal.

The Chemical Corps

adoption of the weapon as a basic firearm at the end of the war. Today, in Korea, the Infantry and Marines are using the 4.2 in. heavy weapons companies, while the Chemical Corps' mortar battalions support those units which are not equipped with the easily maneuverable and portable weapon that packs the punch of a 105-mm. howitzer.

Between 1920 and 1940, the Chemical Corps tried to expound the virtues of aerial incendiary warfare. The theories fell on nearly-deaf ears. World War II proved the soundness of this type of warfare, and today, the Communists are feeling the devastating heat of jettisonable belly tanks filled with Napalm-jellied gasoline, as well as other incendiary bombs. Napalm is also being used in the tank-mounted and portable flamethrowers, the weapons it was originally developed for.

Those are the two biggest contributions the Corps has made to the Korean campaign so far. However, we also have service and technical units on the battlefield, doing their bit to keep the enemy on the run now, and always ready to go into action should the Communists decide to use gas.

Some historians use casualties suffered as a basis for their summations of the prowess of units. If this is a good criterion, it puts the Chemical Corps in an outstanding role. During World War II, on a proportionate figure basis, the Chemical Corps was second to the Infantry (which was first) in the number of casualties. To date, in Korea, the Corps' casualties have not been light.

As one of the Army's seven technical services, the Chemical Corps comes under the jurisdiction of the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4. However, because of its wide range of responsibility it must also work closely with the other services of the Army as well as with the Navy and Air Force, and certain foreign governments in connection with the development and type classification of equipment.

Unification of the armed services in 1946 was not new to the Chemical Corps. It had long practiced unification through the training of Air Force, Navy and Marine personnel at its schools, as well as carrying on certain research and development programs for the Navy and Air Force. In fact, during some years, prior to World War II, the allocation of funds for research work for the air and sea services exceeded the allocations made by the Army.

The Chemical Corps is also well unified with its civilian counterpart, the chemical industry. Because a good share of its research work is carried on under contract by civilian scientists, hospitals, universities, laboratories and industrial concerns, the Corps is one of the greatest utilizers of civilian scientific manpower in the armed services. Among the Corps' consultants are many of the nation's outstanding industrialists and scientists.

For operational purposes, the Chemical Corps can be divided into four main working functions: research and development; personnel; training; supply and procurement.

Prior to June 1950, the Corps' six nationwide procurement districts were engaged only in buying enough items to keep up stockpiles and developing procurement plans in conjunction with industry, should the time come when they must start purchasing chemical warfare items for all three armed services.

How well this planning phase was carried out may be illustrated by the fact that since last October, the Boston district alone, has awarded more than 28 million dollars in contracts in the shortest possible time and with a minimum of trouble. During fiscal years 1951 and 1952, the Corps' expanded procurement program will total more than 20 times the load carried prior to the outbreak of the Korean hostilities. Millions of dollars worth of procurement is being done by the Chemical Corps for the Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps for special supplies needed by them.

Although Chemical Corps troops fight beside Infantry, Engineer, and Armored Force soldiers, the Corps itself is primarily a service of supply. Its mission is to find out what is needed in the field, design and produce it, and make it available for use, whether it's on the fighting front or elsewhere. It's a far from simple job, entailing many types of scientific and technical labor. This work requires the use of civilian "know how" as well as the highly specialized services of hundreds of military and civilian technicians in the laboratories at the Army Chemical Center and Camp Detrick, Maryland; the practical test work at Dugway Proving Grounds, Utah; and the manufacturing arsenals at Edgewood, Maryland; Pine Bluff, Arkansas; and Denver, Colorado. All of this work does not lead just to advancement in military needs. Often work on a military subject develops an off-shoot which can provide something of benefit to everyday civilian life. This is especially true in the field of medicine.

To the average mind, the thought that a poisonous gas can be used as a medicine seems sheer fallacy. However, Chemical Corps scientists, working with medical men, have found that certain nitrogen mustard gases can be used effectively in treating certain forms of cancer. Experimentation has also led to a new antidote for arsenic and mercury poisonings. The basis for this antidote, which also appears to hold promise as a treatment for syphilis, is a compound perfected during the war for combatting Lewisite gas poisonings. And, a nerve gas, since discarded as impractical for war use, turned out to be beneficial in the treatment of glaucoma, an eye disease. All in all, the Corps' medical laboratories have made more than a hundred contributions to medical science in the last few years.

Other aspects of the Corps' work are showing up in the plans being made by the Civil Defense Administration for the

MID-CONTINENT AIRLINES

Serving the Heart of America

GENERAL OFFICES: 102 E. NINTH STREET, KANSAS CITY 6, MO.

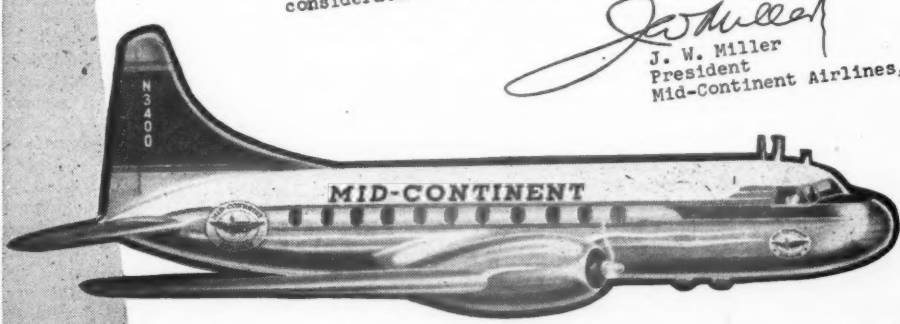

"More than a full year of experience with the Model 240 Convair-Liners on our trunk routes has firmly convinced us that this is the type transport which properly meets the requirements of Mid-Continent's longer haul operations."

"Our recent order for six of the new 44-passenger Model 340 Convairs proves that we are gratified with the plane's performance."

"Public acceptance of this twin-engine transport's pressurized cabin comfort and its 4-engine speed is reflected in load factors experienced on these aircraft since we placed them in service June 1, 1950. The Convair's greater passenger capacity also has enabled us to operate with more profitable payloads."

"Our pilots, too, have found the Convair ideal from the airman's viewpoint. The plane's reserve power provides an extra margin of safety, which always rates first consideration with Mid-Continent Airlines."

"When our government only provides the widow of a man like Admiral Sherman with the magnificent sum of $75 a month, there is something radically wrong with our sense of values."—ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF DEFENSE ANNA M. ROSENBERG.

General Ridgway's Firm Stand. The firmness of General Matthew B. Ridgway in sternly rejecting the Communist demand that Allied troops withdraw to the 38th parallel as a condition for a Korean armistice will be warmly applauded by all Americans. If there is to be a cease-fire agreement it should obviously provide for a demarcation line between opposing armies approximately corresponding to present battle positions. Minor adjustments, of course, may be made, but General Ridgway makes it clear that there will be no appeasement, no major Allied withdrawal. The 38th parallel is not a logical, nor a natural defense line. It would be difficult, if not impossible, to defend. Its selection as a dividing line between the armies would give the Reds a decided military advantage and force the Allies to forfeit hard-won positions on dominating terrain, affording natural protection against sudden onslaughts. Furthermore, should we surrender to the Reds on this point it would be interpreted by the Communists as a sign of weakness, and new and more outrageous demands would follow.

The Soviet government, acting in behalf of its puppet regime in Red China, asked for peace talks only because the Chinese and North Korean Communists had been thoroughly beaten in Korea, with appalling losses of their best troops. Now the Reds are arrogantly trying to demand at the conference table what they lost in battle. Surely no one is so naive as to suppose the Reds would have consented to withdraw to the 38th parallel when they were deep in South Korea. They can scarcely be so unrealistic as to expect any such withdrawal by the Allies, now that the tables are turned.

Naturally, while there is any prospect of a peaceful settlement of the Korean conflict, General Ridgway is hesitant about engaging in major land operations. Any unnecessary casualties should be carefully avoided. However, it may be that another demonstration of military might is essential to impress the Reds of the sincerity of our stand. If so, the Eighth Army, a battle-tested, professional force, unsurpassed in skill and bravery, is ready and eager to meet the enemy.

General Ridgway is leading from strength.

Annuities for Widows. There is vital need for some system of caring for the survivors of service personnel. The meager pensions now provided under a number of different laws are totally inadequate to meet the needs of service widows and their children. There are, also, conditions under which dependents are not covered even by these pitifully small pensions. On the other hand, service pay is so low that there is no opportunity for the building up of suitable estates without the help of outside incomes or resources. There is ample evidence that the concern aroused by this situation has an adverse effect upon morale and hence upon the efficiency of Service personnel.

Nevertheless, the newly proposed survivors' benefits bill submitted to Congress this week must be viewed critically. Due note should be given to the fact that the entire cost is to be borne by the service men themselves. The scale of deductions from Service pay has been increased from those proposed last year, and even these are not firm for the bill provides that they may be revised from time to time as experience indicates. In last year's hearings it was testified that the plan is patterned after that of the Civil Service and Foreign Service except that the military contributions average about 1.4 per cent instead of the one per cent under the civilian plan. Now even those rates are to be raised. Furthermore, an officer or enlisted man may contribute throughout his active career but on retirement he loses all his rights to survivor benefits and must start over again on the retired list, the special rates for which are to be based on mysterious "actuarial equivalents" which doubtless means they will be appreciably higher. We recall that after a similar system for the Civil

Rank for Air AG

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Why does the Air Adjutant General of the Air Force not have the same authorized grade as The Adjutant General of the Army?

That an Adjutant General in the Army may aspire to General officer grade, even in the field, is evidenced by the recent promotion of Brig. Gen. Kenneth B. Bush, Adjutant General, Far East Command to the temporary grade of Major General. Yet, The Air Adjutant General holds only the grade of Colonel while the Adjutant General of the Army is of the grade of Major General.

Can it be that the Army authorizes general officer grade for The Adjutant General and Adjutants General of high field commands, because of the greater importance the Army places on its administrative responsibilities as fulfilled by its Adjutants General?

Has the Air Force lost sight of the fact that its Adjutants General have similar responsibilities including custodianship of documents of the highest classification within the Air Force and handling of key administrative functions? For if an Adjutant General of a headquarters does not function at peak efficiency, the entire headquarters will be retarded in the performance of its mission.

Must the career of an Adjutant General in the Air Force be stymied when he reaches the grade of Colonel? Must he at that time seek a new career and abandon the field where he has spent years gathering invaluable experience, if he desires further advancement?

An Air Force AG.

Permanent USA Promotions

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I have noticed that all complaints concerning the policies used in the Army temporary promotions which began in the fall of 1950 and now continue come from Regular officers. These officers compare the regular promotion list standings with the hodgepodge of temporary promotions and policies used therein as they affect their own particular cases. In all instances the complaints seem pretty legitimate, but since they all come from Regular officers as a result of having looked at the regular promotion list, why not throw the list out the window? It is of no earthly value now and probably will never be as long as we have so many reservists on duty and temporary ranks higher in nearly Service was established, Congress raised their pay so that the net was even greater after the contributory deductions than it had been before. Certainly, if Congress should establish such a system for the Armed Services there should be substantial increases in the pay scale to meet these deductions as well as the increasing cost of living.

The bill as drawn provides that these self-paid annuities shall be in addition to any pensions or other payments to which survivors may be entitled under law. This, however, is not binding on future Congresses and there is the ever-present danger that, in a wave of economy, the legislators may decide that these annuities are enough and abolish all the government pensions.

There should be a system of survivor benefits, but it should be considered an obligation of the government and supported substantially by government funds.

Eight weeks ago Hitler launched his attack against Russia which unquestionably took the Russian High Command by surprise. Within two weeks the Nazis had driven through the Russian-held buffer states and had reached the Stalin line.

The Navy Department is at last moving in the matter of improving the cob dock at the New York Navy Yard, and also the Whitney Basin in the same yard.

85 Years Ago

The "insolence of office" is a phrase as old as Shakespeare, and an experience as old as the first government. It has been thoroughly illustrated in Washington. Promptness and courtesy in dealing with officers has been the rule at the Headquarters of the Army, and we hope this innovation will now be extended to the War Office, and thence to all the others.

every case than permanent rank. The only thing the permanent list now does is cause mutterings and cursings, dissension and discontent.

However, the present policy on temporary rank is utterly foolish because we find that a date is more important than merit. Take the Academy class of 1944 for instance. Recently (about 8 months ago) many of these men were promoted to captain having served 6½ years as lieutenants and now we find many of their classmates being promoted to major having served approximately 6 years as captains. The ridiculousness of this situation is apparent when you realize that these men are all of the same Academy class and no possible stretch of the imagination would lead one to believe that the group now captains are inferior to the group just promoted to major. My class being post-war is still on an even keel but the policy-makers will no doubt devise some method of scrambling us into a mess. The situation is not one which inspires confidence.

Certificates for Service

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

In 1932 THE JOURNAL published an editorial taking the Navy to task for issuing enlisted men given courtesy rank for commissioned service during World War I "merely a mimeographed extract of an order." It was pointed out that the Army issued a "certificate suitable for framing" to such retired personnel.

I served as an officer in both World Wars and have the handsome certificate "advancing" me to "Captain, Regular Army, Retired." I have also two large commissions from that war.

During World War II, I served as a major (and have a Reserve Corps commission covering that grade), lieutenant colonel and (for two months) colonel. I am retired as a lieutenant colonel—but no certificate to hang in my den—hand down to my grandson! Merely a copy of a general order—much folded!

It seems we old-timers should be given such a certificate covering our advanced rank from World War II. We should value such a certificate greatly, especially as no commissions were issued during the War to non-regular officers. The cost would be small. Most of us have a beautiful "testimonial" as master-sergeant, but for our retired commissioned grades—nothing. Please help us!

"Retired."

DELEGATES to the Korean armistice conference at Kaesong this week designated a small sub-committee to consider informally the location of a proposed buffer zone between the two opposing armies. The sub-committee is composed of two United Nations delegates and two Communist representatives. This group will meet informally in an effort to arrive at a recommendation for a dividing line that will be acceptable to both sides. In the meantime formal sessions of the conference will be discontinued.

The Communists are still insisting that the demarcation line be the 38th parallel, the old boundary between North and South Korea, while the United Nations delegation wants the demilitarized zone to follow approximately the present battle line, which, for the most part, is well inside North Korea. At a news conference this week General Matthew B. Ridgway, USA, Commander-in-Chief of the United Nations Forces, said that the Allies had learned from bitter experience on two occasions that the 38th parallel is indefensible, whereas the area along the present battle line offers good defensive positions for both sides.

► GENERAL RIDGWAY SAID there would be no appeasement for the Reds, no Allied withdrawal to the 38th parallel, but at the same time the attitude of the United Nations as to the exact location of the truce zone is not inflexible, that reasonable adjustments in the battle line are possible. He pointed out that the Communists had greatly strengthened their forces in the past month and that they were better prepared to mount a major offensive now than when the truce talks began. However, both General Ridgway and General James A. Van Fleet, USA, Commanding the Eighth Army, expressed complete confidence in the ability of the Allies to stop any attack that might be launched by the Chinese and North Korean Reds.

The tactics of the Reds in continuing to stall the armistice discussions by refusing to consider any suggestion of a compromise of their demand for a buffer zone along the 38th parallel is evidently a part of major Communist strategy to delay the settlement of the Korean conflict as long as possible, without provoking major military operations. The purpose is somewhat obscure, but it may be related to a renewed Soviet attempt to secure overall consideration of Far East problems by the United Nations or by the Five-Power conference so often proposed by Russia, but rejected by the western powers.

► ALLIED DELEGATES TO THE KAESONG CONFERENCE this week suggested that discussion of the buffer zone be temporarily laid aside, and that other items on the agenda, such as supervision of the proposed armistice by joint teams of observers, be considered. This suggestion was promptly rejected by the Red delegation, which insisted on a final determination of the dividing line, before any other matter is discussed.

General Nam Il, North Korean leader of the Red representatives, asked Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy, USN, head of the Allied delegation a series of questions. On receiving the replies he read a long statement, obviously prepared in advance, terming the answers entirely unsatisfactory. On another occasion both delegations sat in complete silence for more than two hours. While little progress is being made at Kaesong, apparently neither side wishes to take the initiative in ending the talks.

Russia this week took the western powers by surprise by accepting the invitation of the United States to attend the San Francisco meeting on 4 Sept., for the purpose of considering the draft of the Japanese peace treaty. Russia had repeatedly refused to enter into preliminary discussions of the proposed treaty, and, after the draft was made public, attacked practically every clause. It was expected that the Soviet government would ignore, or haughtily reject the American invitation extended several weeks ago. However, this week it announced that Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko would head a four-man delegation to San Francisco. The delegation will also include the Russian ambassadors to Washington and London and another foreign office member.

► IT IS UNLIKELY THAT RUSSIA is sending this delegation to California to sign the Japanese treaty. On the contrary, it is probable that the Soviet representatives will seek to capitalize on the difference of views of some of the non-Communist countries, and to attempt to prevent or delay the signing of the treaty by many of the countries represented at the conference. In this maneuver Russia is unlikely to make much headway, but the occasion will provide an opportunity for further propaganda blasts against western democracies. It may be that the stalling tactics of the Reds at Kaesong are not unrelated to Russia's belated decision to be represented at San Francisco. It is quite possible that Russia may use the San Francisco conference as the background for a dramatic announcement of some new Soviet world-wide peace formula, of which an immediate Korean armistice would be a part.

The State Department this week made public the final draft of the proposed Japanese peace treaty. It differs little from the tentative draft previously published, except, as a concession to the Philippines, provision is made for a possible reopening of the reparations question, so that the Philippines may be in a better position to claim partial compensation for the heavy damage incident to the military occupation of that country by Japan. The Department informed Russia that the San Francisco conference is not for the purpose of revising or amending the proposed treaty, but for the formal conclusion and signing of the document. This announcement was evidently for the purpose of forestalling any effort by the Russians to block conclusion of the treaty.

The United States and the Philippines announced late this week that agreement had been reached by the two countries on a mutual defense pact, pledging each nation to "act to meet the common dangers" in the event of an armed attack on either. It is expected that a formal treaty covering this agreement will be signed early next month at San Francisco, following the signing of the Japanese peace treaty, and a similar security convention to which the United States, Australia and New Zealand will be parties.

Negotiations for an early settlement of the Anglo-Iranian oil dispute appeared to be encountering difficulties this week, with the threat of assassination hanging over the heads of the Iranian delegates if they make any major concessions to the British. Accusations of British interference in Persian domestic affairs have been met with a hands-off pledge by the British. The Iranians want a free hand in the operation of the oil properties seized from the British, but concede that they do not have the skilled technicians, and therefore must continue to depend on the British. As to compensation the Iranians want all the profits, while the British think a fifty-fifty division would be appropriate. The British proposal has been rejected by the Iranian Cabinet. Mr. W. Averell Harriman, special representative of President Truman at Teheran, called on the shah this week to express the hope that there would be moderation and reason in the proposed settlement.

With only a single vote in opposition the United States House of Representatives passed a resolution this week urging that all trade relations with Czechoslovakia be severed until that Communist country releases William Oatis, a United States citizen who had been serving as correspondent for the Associated Press at Prague. Oatis was sentenced to a long prison term on trumped-up charges of espionage after a mockery of a trial.

General Bradley Begins Second Term—General of the Army Omar N. Bradley began his second two-year term this week as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Nominated by President Truman to succeed himself, General Bradley was sworn into office at brief Pentagon ceremonies on 15 Aug. by Maj. Gen. William E. Bergin, Adjutant General of the Army.

During his two years in the nation's top military job, he has traveled more than 140,000 miles, accompanied on occasion by other members of the Joint Chiefs (it has become his established policy to have JCS members visit unified commands together to study mutual service problems). General Bradley's tours have taken him to Alaska, Japan, Hawaii, Kwajalein, Guam, Okinawa, Wake Island, Paris, The Netherlands, and London.

Also during his first term as JCS Chairman he has attended 248 meetings of that group, briefed his own staff 262 times, briefed the Joint Chiefs 112 times, and visited the White House and the Presidential yacht for briefings on 177 occasions. He has conducted 37 press conferences, made 38 public addresses and appeared on 29 radio and television broadcasts.

As time-consuming as these tasks appear, they embrace only a small part of the General's multitudinous activities, for in addition, he has almost daily conferences with Secretary of Defense Marshall. He attends meetings and briefings of the Standing Group of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization as well as meetings of the NATO Military and Defense Committees. And, on 47 different occasions, he has journeyed up to "The Hill" to appear before Congressional committees.

All in all, it has been a busy two years, and a job well done.

Restriction on Commissaries—The Military Appropriation Act passed last week by the House and now under consideration by the Senate Appropriations Committee still carries the Bureau of the Budget's plan to increase food costs for service families by tacking operating and overhead expenses on to the cost of items sold in service commissaries and commissary stores. While the amendment is opposed by individual leaders in the Department of Defense, it has the backing of the Bureau of the Budget and the Administration and the support of the Chamber of Commerce and other business organizations.

As originally written the amendment contained a provision specifically amending the act of 1885 which made it subject to a point of order by carrying legislation in an appropriation bill. To avoid this, the amendment was further amended on the floor of the House by striking out this latter provision, but leaving in the portion prohibiting the use of funds for any expense in connection with the maintenance, conduct, operation or management of such exchanges, so that the net destructive effect, as far as the services are concerned, remain the same.

School of Aviation Medicine—Col. Benjamin A. Strickland, jr., has been named commandant of the Gunter Branch of the School of Aviation Medicine, Gunter AFB, Ala. Announcement of the new appointment was made last week by Brig. Gen. Otis O. Benson, jr., Commandant of the School of Aviation Medicine, Randolph AFB, Tex.

Colonel Strickland succeeds Col. Robert J. Platt who has been commandant of the Gunter school since its establishment last October. Colonel Platt is scheduled to retire 31 Aug. after nearly 34 years' service.

Receiving his M. D. degree from Duke University School of Medicine in 1933, Colonel Strickland entered the military service in 1935. During World War II, he was Base Surgeon at Heavy Bomber bases in the continental United States. His overseas service includes tours of duty with the Air Transport Command in the China-Burma-India and Pacific theaters. In 1946, he was brought into the Office of the Surgeon General of the Army on loan from the Air Force for duty as Chief of Physical Medicine in the Army.

Honor Air Sergeant—M/Sgt. Horst W. "Pop" Tittle, the "Grand Old Man of the Air Force," has now been awarded an Oak Leaf Cluster on his Commendation Ribbon, one of eleven awards and decorations that he holds. "Pop," as he is known to Air Force privates and generals alike, is in his 43d year of continuous active duty, said to be the longest active duty time of any non-commissioned officer in the Air Force.

Enlisting originally on 5 June 1908, in the Army, Tittle transferred to the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps in 1917. Commissioned during World War I, he rose to the rank of captain, and at the end of hostilities decided to remain in the service, reverting to the rank of master sergeant. World War II again saw him serving as an officer, and he advanced to the rank of lieutenant colonel, serving as adjutant of the 55th Bomb Wing, Fifteenth Air Force, in Italy. Still wanting to stay on active duty with the Air Force at the end of World War II, "Pop" again exchanged his officer's insignia for the stripes of a master sergeant, and is now stationed at Headquarters Central Air Defense Force, in Kansas City, Mo. There he is serving as a Chief Clerk, and plans to remain on duty as long as he is physically fit.

Ordnance Class Grads

At an informal ceremony at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. this week, the Ordnance School graduated 11 students from its Ordnance general supply course. Col. W. E. Laidlaw gave a brief address.

Nine of the graduates were officers of the Ordnance Reserve Corps or National Guard. The remaining two were T. H. Jamison, a civilian employee from Frankford Arsenal and Capt. H. M. A. Knight, a British Army officer. 2d Lt. Robert L. Thomas was the group's top honor student. Other graduates were:

Maj. Charles L. Riley, Capt. Dane H. Corey, Capt. Edward J. Schneider, 1st Lt. Harold A. Jensen, 2d Lt. Emanuel P. Bono, 2d Lt. Leon J. Brown, jr., 2d Lt. John P. Havey, 2d Lt. John J. Mickey, jr. and CWO Shirley H. Whitmore.

Ships of the Fleet—The aircraft carrier USS Boxer's 45,000th carrier landing, believed to be a record for active Navy flattops, was logged on 6 Aug. when Panther jet pilot Lt. Mel Rines returned from a combat strike over Korea.

The LSTs 822 and 827, tank landing ships of the Pacific Fleet Amphibious Force, docked at San Diego last week after service in the Far East. Lt. Sylvan G. Bushey, USNR, commands the 827 and Lt. K. D. Myers, USNR, is skipper of the 822. Both vessels have transported UN troops and equipment between Korean and Japanese ports and in training exercises off Japan.

After three and one-half years in far eastern waters, the fleet minesweeper Incredible arrived last week in Long Beach. The ship is commanded by Lt. Edward P. Flynn.

► DESTROYER DIVISION 32, consisting of the destroyers Rupertus, skippered by Comdr. Edward E. Grimm, the Leonard Mason, commanded by John B. Ferriter, the Fechteler, commanded by Comdr. Edward S. Manown, and the Henry W. Tucker, commanded by Comdr. George P. Rogers, are returning to the West Coast after a seven-month tour of duty in Korean waters. The division is commanded by Capt. Charles M. Keyes.

The first of seven cargo ships to be turned over to the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands by the U. S. Navy, was transferred on 1 Aug. when Lt. Theron A. Conolly, passed command of the USS Roque to Master Mariner James W. Shephard at Guam. On hand for the ceremony were Capt. F. E. Shoup, USN, Chief of Staff, Commander Naval Forces, Marianas, and Comdr. Ormand Johnson, Commander Service Division 51.

Another group to return recently to the West Coast from Korean waters is Destroyer Division 52, commanded by Capt. D. A. Harris, and consisting of the USS Brinkley Bass, Isbell and Duncan. Captain Harris was commended by Rear Adm. George C. Dyer, Commander Task Force 95, who said, "Your aggressive ships have inflicted much damage to the enemy who will long remember the 'Boss of Wonsan' and his fighting division." The Brinkley Bass is commanded by Comdr. A. F. Beyer, jr., USN, the Isbell by Comdr. F. Hall, jr., USN, and the Duncan by Comdr. E. G. Sander-son, USN.

► THE SEAPLANE TENDER SUISUN, after completing a second tour of duty in the Korean war zone, recently had a brief stopover in Pearl Harbor before proceeding to the U. S. mainland. She is commanded by Capt. Charles C. Howerton, USN.

Two USN rocket ships, the USS LSMR 525 and the USS LSMR 409, were damaged recently in a three-hour fight between UN vessels and land-based Communist gun batteries in the vicinity of Wonsan. There were no casualties. Lt. Comdr. Melvin Bustard was in tactical command of the two vessels. Skipper of the LSMR 409 is Lt. James M. Stewart, and Lt. Price Lewis, jr., commands the LSMR 525.

New commanding officers were assigned last week-end to two carriers in Korean waters. Capt. Paul D. Stroop relieved Capt. William O. Gallery as commander of the Princeton, and Capt. William A. Schoech relieved Capt. James S. Thach as commander of the Sicily. Captain Gallery has been assigned as commanding officer of the Naval Air Station, Whidbey Island, and Captain Thach will become Chief of Staff, Carrier Division 17.

The battle-scarred destroyers USS Walke (DD-723) and the USS Stickell (DD-888) have returned to the west coast.

The Walke lost 26 men when the ship was blasted by an underwater explosion off the east coast of Korea. Although severely damaged she managed to steam to San Diego with the USS Stickell, who acted as escort.

General O'Connell to OCSigO—Brig. Gen. James D. O'Connell, former Signal Officer of Second Army, has been assigned to Special Assignment Group (Boards and Committees), Office of the Chief Signal Officer. He will be replaced as Second Army Signal Officer at Fort George G. Meade, Md., by Col. James Dreyfus, former Deputy Signal Officer of Fifth Army.

Other recent Signal Corps assignments: Col. Marcellus R. Kunitz has been assigned to duty in Army Communications Service Division, OCSigO. Lt. Col. Lawrence G. Forbes has been assigned to duty in Engineering Control Branch, Engineering and Technical Division, OCSigO. 1st Lt. Cornelius Groenewoud has been assigned to duty in Communication Liaison Branch, Signal Plans and Operations Division, OCSigO.

Air Judge Advocates—Seventy-one officers received diplomas 10 Aug. from the Air Command and Staff School's second Judge Advocate General course at Maxwell AFB, Ala. Maj. Gen. Reginald C. Harmon, Judge Advocate General, USAF, spoke to the graduating class. Chaplain (Col.) Leslie Zimmerman, command chaplain, gave both the invocation and the benediction.

Included in the graduating class of 71 Air Force officers is one woman, Maj. Dorothy Salipante Feddern, who entered the Navy in 1944, switching to the Air Force in 1949.

Brig. Gen. Reuben C. Hood is commandant of the Air Command and Staff School. Lt. Col. James E. Driver is director of the Judge Advocate General course.

Transportation Corps—Col. William V. Owen was designated Chief of the Military Planning and Intelligence Division and Col. Kenneth W. Gillespie was designated Chief of the Movements Control Division, in the Office, Chief of Transportation, it was announced by Maj. Gen. Frank A. Heileman, Chief of Transportation.

Colonel Owen has been assigned to the Military Planning and Intelligence Division since 30 Nov. 1949. Colonel Gillespie, prior to his assignment as Chief of Movements Control Division, OCOFT, was Superintendent of the Water Division, Headquarters, 2d Transportation Medium Port, Far East Command.

Mobilize Civil Aviation—A uniform state plan for civil aviation mobilization has been suggested by Civil Aeronautics Administrator Charles F. Horne and sent out to all state governors for action. It was evolved by the Aviation Development Advisory Committee of the CAA and the Emergency Aviation Council, and recommends the appointment of state directors of aviation to head the emergency mobilization effort. The plan also suggests that a state aviation advisory council be appointed to work with the director.

Area or section chiefs would serve with the state director, with county and local chiefs assisting. CAA's communications system would be used to send out initial alert messages. In announcing the proposal, Mr. Horne said, "We want to be certain, through advance planning, that all the valuable services of the civil pilot and his aircraft will be available for use in emergency."

Army Medical Department—Maj. Madeline Ulom, ANC, who began earning her college credits at Santo Tomas University in the Philippines as a Japanese prisoner of war in World War II, has completed her work for a Master of Science Degree in nursing service administration at Catholic University, Washington, D. C. After a short vacation, she will report to the U. S. Army Hospital at Sandia Base, Albuquerque, New Mexico, to be chief nurse.

Capt. Harriet Werley, ANC, has joined the Personnel Division of the Surgeon General's Office. She comes from New York City where she was recently awarded a Master's Degree in Nursing Education, by Teachers College, Columbia University.

Eight representatives from the Office of the Surgeon General of the Army will be among those present at the five-day annual convention of the American Hospital Association which opens 16 Sept. in St. Louis, Mo. They include Maj. R. L. Brown and Mr. Joseph A. Keeney from the Army section of the Armed Services Medical Materiel Standardization Committee; Col. B. N. Rlordan, Lt. Col. Nina M. Baker, ANC, Lt. Col. J. J. Strnad and Mr. W. J. Balderson, from the Supply Division; Maj. Dorothy V. Elliott, ANC, Nursing Division; and Lt. Col. K. C. DeGon, from the Dental Division.

Lt. Col. Eleanor L. Mitchell, WMSC, traveled to Ft. Riley, Kans., this week to inspect the food service department of the U. S. Army Hospital there. As a section chief of the Medical Plans & Operations Division, Surgeon General's Office, Colonel Mitchell conferred with the dietitians on the hospital staff.

One Commander for Each Ocean—A Navy destroyer, the USS English, recently set some sort of record when it sailed smoothly through the Atlantic Ocean under one commanding officer, and later the same day continued on its peaceful way through the Pacific under another CO.

It all happened this way: Comdr. Raymond J. Toner, the new CO, reported aboard the English to relieve Comdr. Matthew DeMaria shortly before the destroyer sailed from Norfolk. He decided, however, not to take command of the ship until he knew it a little better. As the English entered Gatun locks on the Atlantic side of the Panama Canal, Commander Toner decided that the time was ripe to make the command change. The actual ceremony took place in the fresh-water of Miraflores Lake—midway of the isthmus, and as the ship entered the Pacific Commander DeMaria was put ashore, and the English continued on its way to Korea under a new CO.

Air Rescue Service—A detachment of the 3d Air Rescue Squadron recently had its biggest day of the Korean campaign when helicopter pilots picked up 94 Turkish combat troops in 45 sorties. The Turkish infantrymen, who had been isolated from the main body of troops by rising river tides surrounding an island, were picked up by five helicopters. The last 16 men were pulled to safety from the roof of a truck cab by hydraulic hoists.

Earlier in the campaign, 3d Air Rescue Squadron pilots set a record by picking up 123 men over a two-day period. Noting the number of sorties, hours flown and lives saved, Air Rescue Service headquarters in Washington points out that one life has been saved for each hour of flight time. Most recent figures place the total lives saved at over 2,306.

Pilots on this latest operation were Capt. Osburn E. McKinzie, Capt. Lynden E. Thomas, 1st Lt. Charles H. Field, jr., 1st Lt. Gene W. Ruklander and Lt. Robert L. Dunlap.

Women Abroad—For the first time in peacetime history the Canadian Army is to have a female medical officer. Holder of this distinction is Capt. Ellice Agnes Parmenter, 29-year-old Scottish doctor and mother of two children, who recently was appointed to the Army in a brief ceremony at the Canadian Army Liaison Establishment, London, England.

Col. Sybil Irving, M.B.E., war-time controller of the Australian Women's Army Service, has been appointed Honorary Colonel of the Women's Royal Australian Army Corps for a period of five years. Colonel Irving served with the A.W.A.S. from its inception and was appointed Controller of the A.W.A.S., with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, in September 1941. During the war years the A.W.A.S. reached a peak strength of over 24,000.

Colonel Irving transferred to the Reserve of Officers (A.W.A.S.) in 1947 to become General Secretary of the Victorian Division, 'Australian' Red Cross Society, which position she still holds.

The Monterey Peninsula Country Club, inspired by one of America's great generals, offers an abundant way of life to retired Army and Navy officers—in an area where some of America's most distinguished citizens reside.

This, the largest and most popular Club on the Monterey Peninsula, has a fine golf course, bathing pool, tennis courts—and a magnificent club house, with excellent cuisine, for an attractive social life. Although planned originally for retired officers, the Club has become so popular that, today, approximately half its members are civilians.

It is a proprietary Club. Property ownership is requisite for regular membership. A generous building site, and a membership, are surprisingly low in cost, and dues are nominal.

The nursery, operated for the convenience of all families living on the base, is composed of two large rooms completely furnished. Mrs. S. C. Headlough is director of the nursery with Mrs. Louise Mayes as full time assistant. Both operate under the supervision of a nursery committee composed of six ladies drawn equally from the Officers Wives', NCO Wives' Clubs and the Ladies of the Civilian Club. Brig. Gen. Walter R. Work will be done simultaneously on both sites with the hope that the completion date will be about the same.

Maxwell AFB, Ala. The aeromedical school, with headquarters at Randolph Field, is included in his command.

The Chemical Corps

protection of our people and cities. As a part of its training responsibility, the Corps annually graduates hundreds of service personnel from its school at the Army Chemical Center. Since its inception in 1920, more than 40,000 officers and men of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, and Public Health Service, as well as selected groups of foreign officers, have gone through the school. Plans are now being made to move the school to Fort McClellan, Alabama, to allow for its expansion. The Corps also collaborates with the air and sea services in the writing of instructional publications for those services' own training programs.

The role of the Chemical Corps in our national defense setup may be likened to the multi-platoon system of football. This particular platoon has a special set of plays, but it is kept on the bench, with only individual members of the unit seeing regular action. Its full potentialities are kept secret from the fans and the opponents alike. Sitting there on the bench, it may become a big psychological factor in the mind of the opponents, who have some idea of the powerful set of plays it possesses. Meanwhile it perfects its plays and players so that if called upon in the "Big Game" it will be prepared to make long gains and winning scores.

Retired Colonel Cited

A citation for services as 1951 American Red Cross Fund Chairman, was awarded recently to Col. Robal A. Johnson, USA-Ret., in recognition of outstanding loyalty, patriotism and public service at the annual meeting of the Rice County Chapter, American Red Cross, Faribault, Minn.

POPULATION

Now, the people of the free world outnumber the Soviet bloc two to one. BUT—If Europe and Asia were lost, people under the Soviets would outnumber us more than three to one.

INDUSTRY * FINANCE * MARITIME

Subcontract on Canberra

A contract has been signed between The Glenn L. Martin Company, Baltimore, Md., and Kaiser Metal Products, Inc., of Bristol, Pa., whereby the Kaiser Co., under subcontracting arrangements from Martin will engineer, tool and manufacture wings for the twin-jet Canberra night intruder bomber to be built in substantial quantities by the Martin Company for the U.S. Air Force.

Mr. C. C. Pearson, president and general manager of Martin, said that the dollar value of the work subcontracted to Kaiser cannot be revealed for reasons of military security but that it is very large and that it represented a further expansion of a sizable subcontracting program already announced.

Capt. Mackey Joins Air Firm

Capt. Roger D. Mackey, MC, USN-Ret., recently retired District Medical Officer of the Eighth Naval District, New Orleans, La., has joined Northrop Aircraft, Inc., of Hawthorne, Calif., as medical director. Announcement of his appointment was made by John B. Clark, Director of Industrial Relations.

Captain Mackey has a background of 33 years' military service. His World War II activity was highlighted by the amphibious landings at Guadalcanal where his coordination of facilities for shore to ship evacuation and treatment of casualties set a basic pattern for subsequent campaigns. Also, prior to his assignment to New Orleans, he commanded the U. S. Naval Hospital at San Diego.

Report to Naval School

Two officers have reported for duty as new members of the staff of the U. S. Naval School in Monterey, Calif. They are Lt. Comdr. Paul Lawrence Hathaway and Ship's Clerk Harry E. Howell.

British Buy U.S. Built Ships

Analysis of surplus sales by the U.S. Government of World War II war-built vessels reveals that the investment by British shipping companies was more than double that of any other nation outside of the United States whose interests paid $791,555,535.00 for a total of 843 vessels. British companies acquired 218 vessels for which was paid $189,762,289.72 out of a total of $923,147,739.78 by 34 foreign countries.

The American Merchant Marine Institute estimates that the sale of U.S. war-built vessels has returned to the U. S. Treasury a greater sum than any other war-time industry. Sales of surplus ships which were terminated in January of 1951 totaled 1,956 vessels, for which was paid $1,714,703,274.78, based upon the net sales price which is the adjusted statutory sales price set by Congress under the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946, as amended, less allowances for conversion.

This was the greatest sale of merchant vessels ever to take place in the history of the world, its only rival in size and magnitude and financial return being the sale of vessels conducted after World War I by the U.S. Shipping Board.

It may be noted that the present U. S. flag privately-owned cargo fleet is composed of practically all new vessels constructed during the past decade, having at least ten more years of usefulness. C-type vessels constitute the backbone of the American-flag freight fleet of today. Unfortunately, block obsolescence of the entire fleet will become a problem after 1960 since by 1966 all of these war-built vessels will have attained an age of 20 years. In addition, over 250 U.S.-flag tanker vessels constructed during the war and sold by the Government to private interests also face block obsolescence between 1960 and 1966. Tanker operators, however, have been constructing new vessels during the post-war years. Since the end of the war, a total of 518 vessels of all types aggregating 4,460,415 deadweight tons have been reduced to scrap in the United States. During the past year, 32 large merchant vessels aggregating 217,878 deadweight tons were sold for scrap, including eight overaged Colliers and bulk ore carriers, three tankers, three passenger ships, 13 cargo vessels, one dredger and a number of large excursion vessels.

Builds Tank Hulls

A contract for quantity production of 15-ton armored steel hulls for the Army's new M-47 medium tank at Carrier's heavy machinery plant, Syracuse, N. Y., has been announced by Cloud Wampler, president of Carrier Corporation.

The tank order is one of several defense contracts undertaken by Carrier, totalling in aggregate more than $50,000,000, which includes its recently announced contract for production parts for General Electric's J-47 turbojet engine. The tank hulls will be produced under sub-contract to the American Locomotive Company of Schenectady.

U. S. COAST GUARD

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week that transportation of Coast Guard dependents and shipment of their household effects will be authorized by headquarters when four conditions are met. They are: 1—that applicants are legally entitled to transportation of dependents and shipment of household effects at Government expense; 2—that the senior Coast Guard officer at destination certifies that suitable housing and facilities are available; 3—that the entry of dependents is agreeable to the appropriate Area commander; and 4—that there is reasonable expectation of a six months continuance of tour of duty after arrival of dependents at overseas stations. Headquarters said a letter request in triplicate showing names, ages, and address of dependents must be submitted to the Commandant (FS-2) through the chain of command together with six certified copies of change of station orders, certification that suitable housing and facilities are available, certification that the entry of dependents is agreeable to the appropriate Area Command, Standard Form 116 if movement of household effects is requested, and form CG-2663 if Transportation Requests are desired for dependents. A letter of authorization and instructions, together with Transportation Requests if requested, will be forwarded to the senior dependent upon arrival.

A computation has been completed showing the distribution of officers in the various grades on active duty, and the following numbers in grades were authorized:

Rear Adm .....	13
Capt .....	137
Comdr .....	258
Lt Comdr .....	451
Lt .....	578
Lt (jg) and Ensign .....	900

Headquarters has referred to Personnel Circular 20-51, which requests applications from officers for duty in Merchant Marine Inspection, and pointed out that it is not the intention of the Coast Guard "at present to assign chief warrant officers, warrant officers, nor recently appointed officers and recalled reserve officers to this duty."

Rear Adm. Russell E. Wood, Deputy Chief of Staff, CGHQ, was sworn in this week in his new flag rank. The oath was administered by Vice Adm. Merlin O'Neill, Commandant.

The Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct was awarded this week by the U.S. Army to Capt. Howard C. Bridges, USCG (Ret) in the office of First Army Commander, Governors Island, N. Y. The award was made to Captain Bridges for his service as Officer-in-Charge, Merchant Marine Inspection Service, N. Y. District from July 1942 to May 1945.

Cadets Leave West Point

Forty of the 90 West Point cadets who have been charged with breaking the Military Academy's honor code, left this week for their homes after being placed in a leave status, pending formal release. Col. James B. Leer, Academy Information Officer, said that all of the group had resigned and that, as far as he knew, "nobody has been acquitted."

Before leaving the Academy, the group visited Maj. Gen. Frederick A. Irving, the Academy Superintendent, individually, for what Colonel Leer termed "a word of encouragement." General Irving told the cadets that he was confident they "will rise above this and have successful careers."

Cardinal Spellman of New York, meanwhile, made a statement that all of the cadets would be accepted upon application to any one of three Roman Catholic colleges — including Fordham — in the New York archdiocese.

Advertisers in the Army Navy Air Force Journal support the Armed Forces and are familiar with their requirements.
